Subject Information and Consent Form

Introduction

You are being invited to take part in a research study. This research will study how native English speakers use the demonstrative expression "that" and how they judge the influential thought experiment discussed in the philosophical literature concerned with the semantics of demonstratives. It is your choice if you want to participate in this study or not. You can withdraw from the study at any time. By participating in this study, you are agreeing to provide the most honest answers you can. Any responses you provide will be anonymized so that neither the researcher nor anyone who might be helping the researcher to analyze and compile the results will know which responses are yours. The (anonymized) research data collected in this study will be available under the terms of a free license and will serve as a basis for reviewed publications in the field of semantics. This study has not been designed to commercialize the results or the collected data.

What Is the Purpose of This Study?

The main reason for conducting this study is to help answer the following research questions: what are the key elements that need to be considered when developing a cognitively plausible semantics of the English determiner/pronoun "that" and what cognitive factors are involved in judging the thought experiments presented in the study? The study is designed to monitor changes that might occur when the target of demonstrative "that" is presented as valuable/valueless in the given context.

Who Can Take Part in This Study?

To take part in this study you must be a native English speaker. You should not take part in this study if you do not meet all of the following requirements.

You cannot participate in this study if:

- You are younger than 18 or you are older than 35
- You are not a native speaker of English
- You have language-related disorders, such as dyslexia (problems with reading or spelling words) or aphasia (problems with comprehending or formulating language)
- You are viewing this study on a mobile device with a screen smaller than 11 inches—it is recommended that you open this study on your personal computer (laptop or desktop) with a screen greater than or equal to 11 inches

Risks and Discomforts

We do not anticipate any risks from participating in this research.

Compensation for Participation

You will receive compensation for being in the study: £5.00 per hour. The exact amount of money that you will receive will be calculated by Prolific and will depend on the amount of time you spend on completing the task. On the last screen, you will receive a unique Completion Code which you may use on Prolific to prove you completed the study.

If You Have Questions

The main researcher conducting this study is Dominik Dziedzic, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Warsaw. If you have any questions or concerns regarding your rights as a subject in this study, you may contact Dominik Dziedzic at d.dziedzic2@uw.edu.pl.

I agree to participate in the research study ☑